How Do You Dry Out Glass Fiber?

Glass fiber microwave drying machine can be designed according to the size and shape of yarn group, felt, cloth, blanket, etc., as well as different requirements and characteristics of drying temperature, film forming time, hardness and moisture content. There are three types of glass fiber drying equipment: crawler type continuous transmission, intermittent or intermittent traveling type, and microwave hot air mixing type. Compared with traditional drying equipment, it can save energy by about 30%, and can greatly improve fiber quality. The glass fiber drying equipment is divided into heating area, water extraction area and film forming area to meet the drying requirements of fibers. The glass fiber drying equipment adopts PLC to automatically control the drying temperature, humidity and drying time, and the human-machine interface adopts the touch screen type, which can flexibly set the drying process. The microwave power is designed according to the user's output and dehydration requirements. It is a fireproof board drying equipment with a high degree of automation.
